100 years of school food

Helmi T., Emma, Alisa, Aini J.

There are only two countries where you can get free school food, Finland and Sweden. Finland was the first country in the world where you got free school food.

The menu of the week at schools in Helsinki in 1959:

Rye porridge
Semolina porridge
Cabbage soup
Pea soup
Rice gruel

Here in Finland came a law oblige schools to serve warm food every day. In Finland school food belong to curriculum. In junior high school pupils don't eat as much as in primary school.

The new recommendation says that it is important to eat together and take your time. Fish, another white meat and vegetable food could add to school food more. In schools people ate lots of soups and porridges at 1959. According to the National Institute for Health and Welfare, "School food is successful, when it is inviting for everyone."

Wolf hunting is getting better: Kaavi-Juankoski's hunting permits are used

Ella, Aini P

Northern wolf-hunting area has one hunting permit left from Vieremä-Sukeva wolf group.

In Kaavi-Juankoski, wolf hunting has ended. The Finnish Wildlife Agency has given a special hunting license to kill two wolfs in Kaavi-Juankoski. They asked a permission to kill six wolfs. Hunting license is asked because in Kaavi the wolfs killed three dogs. The wolf group that killed the dogs is still a mystery to the researchers. They are not sure why the wolves behave like that, but it seems that the alpha male has disappeared.

Ukraina's president Petro Porosenko swears in the name of C.G. Mannerheim

Porosenko was interviewed before the state visitors dinner. He said that President Sauli Niinistö has a reason to feel proud to lead so stable and united democracy. Finnish war hero Mannerheim is very appreciated in Ukraina.

Mannerheim is population uniting leader. We are trustful in our situation against Russia. We are capable to defend our country and our european values. By this way the popularity of Mannerheim explains itself. Says Porosenko.

Porosenko thinks that if someone, then finnish people can understand what In the press conference Porosenko said how important cooperation and understanding are under hybrid threat especially Russian's cyber threat.

The presidents also talked about developing the economical cooperation.

TRUMP WANT'S TO CONTINUE BUILDING THE OIL PIPES THAT OBAMA ONCE DENIED

Jaakko, Tuomas, Aaron, Eemeli, Eero

Donald Trump has decided to continue building the keystone XL-oil pipe from Canada to the United States, even though Barack Obama said on March 2015 that it wouldn't be built.

Environmental organizations have rejected the XL-project, because it would be very harmful to the environment. In order to extract the oil from the tar sand, it would need to be handled with big amounts of boiling water, which would create lake pollutions.

According to Trump, the keystone XL would cost 5.3 billion dollars and employ up to 28000 people. This, however is far different from the prediction done by the US state department in 2014, which said that it would only employ about 3900 people.

Trump also wants to speed up the making of the Dakota access-oil pipe. However, the national people are very negative about this, and want to take legal action against Trump, but he doesn't care.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN NEXT?

Johaug's trial is in Oslo 25th - 27th of January. If Johaug gets the 14 month suspension she will take part so far only to the 2018 winter Olympics.

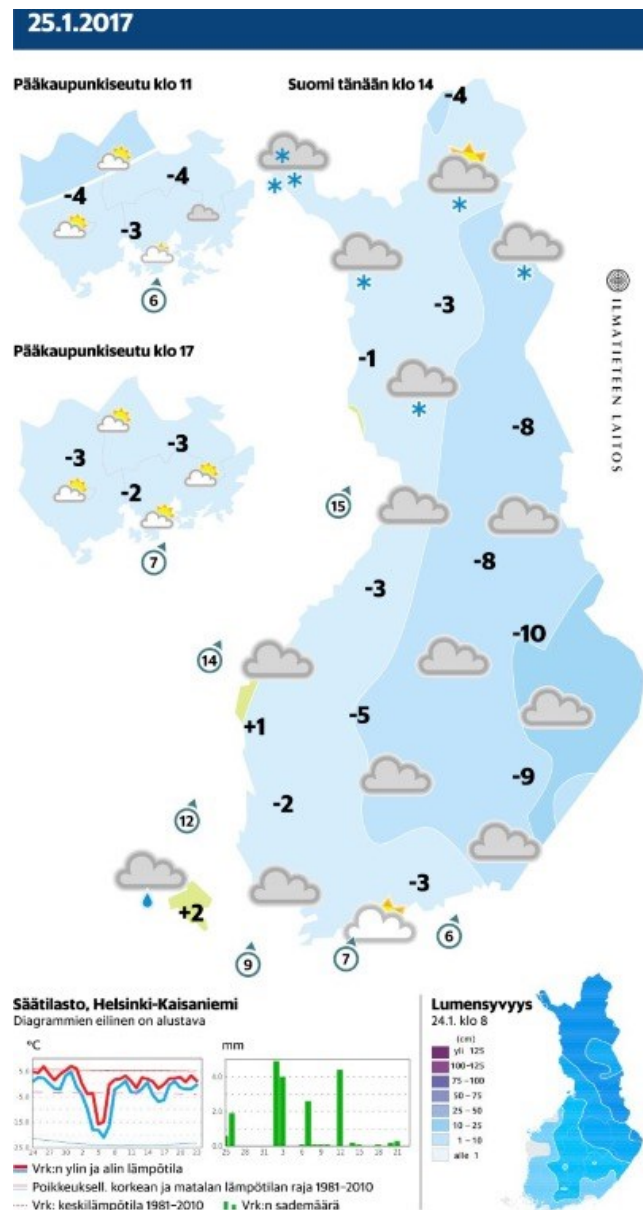

Finnish weather and The Northern Lights

Sara, Selma

THE WEATHER today is cloudy and grey. First the temperature is about 0C, but later it will fall. Today the wind gets stronger. Lapland is very stormy.

This winter is still a good time to see The Northern Lights.

It's very rare to see The Northern Lights at the moment, but around Friday and Saturday it's possible to see them.

"It matches with the weather, because there are not that many clouds on Friday and Saturday", says Tiera Laitinen.

Photographer Kimmo Kantola got an amazing shot of The Northern Lights from Ursa.
